6. Employing and managing people

6.15 Equal opportunities policy

Employees have a right to be treated fairly and considerately, which is supported by law. Organisations therefore should be committed to taking positive steps to promote and sustain equal opportunities amongst its trustees, staff and volunteers.

An equal opportunities policy should state the organisation's values on equality and diversity (fairness) and how it will be put into practice. The policy will also demonstrate to staff, potential recruits, volunteers and customers that the organisation is serious about fairness at work and will help to identify the behaviour expected, the behaviour which is not acceptable and what can be expected from the organisation. An equal opportunities policy may assist organisations to obtain funding, it underpins the organisation's action plan and assists the organisation to comply with the law. There are several pieces of legislation that combat discrimination and promote equal opportunities and diversity. These are:

- Equal Pay Act 1970
- Sex Discrimination Act 1975
- Race Relations Act 1976
- Disability Discrimination Act 1995
- Employment Rights Act 1996
- Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000
- Employment Act 2002
- Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003

- Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003
- Employment Equality (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2003
- Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006
- Work and Families Act 2006

For an equal opportunities policy to be effective, it must have the support of everyone in the organisation and be an integral part of the business strategy. Involve managers at all levels to gain their commitment and develop the policy in consultation with employees and their representatives. All employees should be made aware of the organisation's equal opportunities policy and it is good practice for all existing and new employees to receive training.

The following is an example of an equal opportunities policy, which should be adapted to suit your own organisation. It is provided for guidance only and should not be regarded as an authoritative statement of the law., This example concentrates on employing and managing people. You may wish to include additional requirements (eg service delivery, provision of services). See Information Sheet 2.9 for more information.
